Eastwood land involved

Water board hears of proposal for new dam

By NANCY HILLS

CONTRACTOR ALAN Williams outlined a proposal Monday night to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board to build a 20,000-acre-foot dam on three Carmel Valley properties, one owned by former Carmel mayor Clint Eastwood.

The dam would be filled by pumping water from the Carmel Valley aquifer up into the canyon during peak rainfall periods.

Williams said that California-American Water Co. and Eastwood have shared the approximately $20,000 for initial seismic and geological studies.

Williams added that he has not discussed with any of the state and federal agencies what permits and environmental review will be required, but he is starting that process now.

"We wanted to get in step with the water district before we talked to the other agencies," Williams explained.

The dam would be used for a drought reserve and growth exclusively, Williams said, and not for environmental enhancement. The district's project will provide for the environment, Williams said, but the private project can take care of the people right now.

"Hopefully, it will solve some of the problems," he said.

He projects that he can get a draft environmental impact report ready in 90 days and be filling the dam in five years, though other water and government officials contacted by The Carmel Pine Cone privately expressed doubt that that timeline is possible.

Because it is a private project and off the Carmel River, Williams said they believed they would be able to avoid many of the problems the district has encountered in its attempts to develop a dam.

"It is out of the way of the fish and there is no riparian vegetation to worry about," Williams said.

"It's just an idea we came up with back a couple of years ago," Eastwood said. "Rather than making it hypothetical, we thought we would research it and see if it was feasible. So far, we have heard less on the down side than the up side.

"It came up when we were looking at ideas for a dam a couple of years ago. Alan came up with this one," he said. "People often come up with creative ideas, like Tom May's idea of making a library out of a bank building."

Eastwood said he would donate a portion of the land he has owned for 20 years but will not pay for the project or an environmental impact report on it. He does not plan to develop the property, he said.

"I'm not really looking for anything out of it," Eastwood said.

Another owner, Howard Morgens, said he also would donate his land if the project went through. Morgens has been trying to build an approximately 100-unit project on the property for years, he said.

The third owners, the Monterra project group, was divided in its information.

On partner in the project, Monterey architect Walter Holms said, "I don't know anything about it," except that someone had suggested it about two years ago.

Monterra project manager Richard Stevens in Southern California said they were interested as long as it did not slow down their own permitting process for a development that includes more than 300 homes. Holms was not consulted because the dam was not a Monterra project.

An Australian group, Austram, has an option on the property and is developing the Monterra project through the Hanover-Monterra Corp.

The Monterra project will need to build its own water treament facility, which Holms priced at about $1.5 million. That money, if they agreed, would go toward the dam instead, Williams explained.

Williams said the confusion probably arose because people were informed on a "need-to-know" basis only so as not to let the project leak out prematurely.

Larry Foy, Cal-Am general manager, said that the company has been interested in the site for years, along with other sites off the main stem of the Carmel River. The company will begin more intense study of the site now before it decides to commit to the project.

"We have been leaning twoard in recent years off stream storage," Foy said.

Williams projected the costs to build the dam at approximately $35 million to $45 million, which would be paid for by Cal-Am, but was still gathering data about the annual operating costs.

Foy explained that Cal-Am would float a bond to pay for the project, which will be paid back through an increase in water rates.

Because the company would have to increase its rates to pay for the project, it will have to be reviewed by the state Public Utilities Commission.

THE DAM will get its water through a large underground collecting tank, called a "horizonal well" by Williams, which would be dug into the Leonard and Emily Williams property in Carmel Valley (no relationship to Alan Williams).

It is also described as a concrete "room" with a dirt floor to allow water to percolate in to fill the space. Once filled, the water would then be pumped out and up the hill to the canyon behind the 275-foot-high "containment berm" of shale.

Removal of 20,000 acre feet of water from the aquifer, even during peak flows, could trigger water rights and underflow issues.

Henrietta Stern, water district project manager, said that the district found it an "intriguing" idea and they would be glad to get more information on it.

The district will analyze how the project might work with different sized dams designed to restore the river environment as well as provide for human consumption.

Pine Cone was at forefront to pave Coast Highway 1

(Editor's note: The Carmel Pine Cone is in its 75th year of publication, adding to our history as the oldest continually published newspaper on the Monterey Peninsula. Our Diamond Jubilee Year series of articles and photographs continues this week as we look at the history of Carmel by the Sea as seen through the pages of the Pine Cone over three quarters of a century.)

Chapter 2: 1917-1920 The Great War

By Ray Mungo

OH WHAT a year it was in 1917 as the young Carmel Pine Cone, fresh from victory in its editorial campaign to incorporate the village, found itself in the forefront of a movement to pave Coast Highway 1 from Carmel, "terminus of the road of ten thousand wonders," to San Simeon.

Only one thing could postpone the great project: war. The "war to end all wars" was ravaging Europe while President Woodrow Wilson tried to keep the U.S. out. Pine Cone editor and publisher William L. Overstreet, who had been in Wilson's corner the year before, now saw no alternative but to fight. "Peace without victory," he wrote, was a "copperhead peace of dishonor."

Meanwhile the paper had become the heartbeat of the town. Voter registration was conducted at the Pine Cone office and you could inquire after real estate there. The newspaper's headquarters was "a general information bureau (as a newspaper office should be). By actual count, 76 persons called at this office last week." These included someone checking on a resident's creditworthiness, and a Gypsy palm-reader testing the climate of the village for her business.

One major news story advanced the possibility that an oil vein existed underground at Point Lobos. "There's a rumor the government desires to establish a national park there," the paper reported in an effort to quell oil speculation. Point Lobos was primarily a recreational spot then as now, with round-trip auto rides from the village as advertised at 75 cents.

Another big story was the passage of town ordinance number 7, prohibiting the cutting of trees. This law, so famous still that the 1989 edition of the travel guide Let's Go USA declares "it is a felony to cut a tree in Carmel," actually made it a misdemeanor to "cut down, remove, injure, or mutilate any tree, shrub or bush growing or standing on any of the streets, squares, parks, or public places" in town.

"Do it now — buy your Carmel lot. Prices will never be lower," the Pine Cone said in its continuing effort to boost local growth. Indeed the town had grown from a summer colony of about 450 people to gain "a reputation the world over as a permanent art center." The paper printed some 25,000 stickers reading "Vacation in Carmel by the Sea" and distributed all of them in under six months. Some of the bargains for new settlers:

"$2,500 — House of six rooms and bath, electric lights, porch. Terms. Pine Cone office."

"For rent: three-room cottage with fireplace, located in pine forest. $10 a month, water free. Inquire Pine Cone office."

Let Old Glory Wave

There's hardly a community of any size in California, especially at this time, that does not boast a town flag-pole and a town flag.

Carmel once had these things. We should have have them now. A number of patriotic citizens have asked the Pine Cone to start the thing going.

Therefore the Pine Cone announces that subscriptions to a "Flag-Pole Fund" will be received and acknowledged, beginning today.

Every man, woman and child should contribute. About $50 is needed—quickly.

"For sale: $50 each. Four lots, two corner, two inside, 40 x 100. Ten-minute walk from Carmel post office. Address P.O. Box 3 or Pine Cone."

"For sale: the prettiest place in Carmel for $2,000. Terms. Worth $3,000.

Ah, we should have been there, friends. The most fetching advertisement of all was this:

"Anyone having $500 to invest could not do better than to acquire 40 acres of land, capable of producing when plowed and cleared of manzanita roots, good crops. Such a piece of land is available a mile and a half east of the Carmel Highlands. On the land, which has been surveyed, is a two-room house and nearby a year-round spring of good water. There is a fair road from the highway to the property. The owner has too much land. Clear title. Inquire at the Pine Cone office."

Public responsibility

(Editor's Note: The following speech was presented at the Carmel Residents Association's recent Citizen of the Year celebration by J.S. Holliday, CRA president.)

ONCE, LONG ago, there was a saying heard around this nation—"What America needs is a good five cents cigar." That was, indeed, a long time ago, when we were more naive and seemingly blessed with frivolous problems.

Today we have problems that torment and threaten all of us. And what we need today are leaders who will help us understand the choices we must make to cope with those torments and threats, leaders who will make the hard choices that we are not willing or able to make ourselves.

We need such leaders right here in Carmel—for although we live in an oasis where our problems are far less severe than those of almost any other community, we know that our blessings must not be taken for granted; we know that what we prize and enjoy is being eroded by outside forces pressing in on our special place; and eroded, too, by our failure to support those leaders and those next-door neighbors who have the courage to speak up in defense of the hard choices.

We have gathered here today as a testament that each of us individually and all of us collectively value and honor our neighbors who speak out at city council meetings and at planning commission meetings and at the many meetings during which our new General Plan was formulated; neighbors who write letters to our newspaper, who help to organize and lead such citizen groups as the Carmel Residents Association and the Northeast Neighbors Association and who serve on the several city commissions and special committees—in a word, those citizens whose work and sense of public responsibility arouse the rest of us to do our share.

Carmel has a rich tradition of citizen participation in local politics, in self-government—from Perry Newberry and Gunnar Norberg ot the many candidates who ran for office in last year's election. Through many decades this town has earned widespread recognition for what Harold Gilliam has called "the over-riding truth about Carmel"—that the citizens of this community have the will to defend themselves against the forces of commercialization!

In this long tradition of citizen involvement and leadership, there has not been a moment, a ritual when we stop to honor that citizen who has most effectively worked to preserve what we all believe—the central idea of Carmel, set forth in Ordinance #96—that this is "primarily, essentially and predominantly a residential city."

We have gathered here today to honor such a person—gathered to start a new tradition, the ritual of honoring the Carmel Citizen of the Year.

Our committee has been charged with the responsibility of selecting the first recipient of what will surely become an ever more prestigious award. We have received 62 presentations, recommending a total of 16 nominees. Each of these nominations reflects what I have been talking about—citizen involvement and leadership in the governing and protection of our town. We found our task of selecting the one, most deserving person to be a truly challenging and difficult decision. We gave serious consideration to several well-qualified nominees, men and women who will surely be considered by next year's committee.

For 1988 we have selected a person whose work is known to every one of us. More than anyone else nominated, this person most clearly exemplified the kind of citizen leadership and involvement that these difficult times call for.

What a pleasure it will be for all of us to applaud the 1988 Citizen of the Year who speaks out rationally, thoughtfully, patiently; who listens and takes time to read and study and think about the opinions of others and the documents and records and information needed to form an objective decision—who makes the hard choices we know will be best for Carmel's future.

On behalf of the members and the board of directors of the Carmel Residents Association, the Selection Committee is proud to announce that the first annual Citizen of the Year Award has been won by; James R. Wright.

Domino theory

Dear Editor:

As I read the articles in the Sun and the Pine Cone concerning the development of the land and the widening of the roads, I am horrified and dismayed. It is time, as a community, not to be so complacent.

This is our valley and it is quickly losing its integrity as a rural, quiet place. It is more than disheartening to hear that the fertile land near the Valley Hills Center will be paved over to make way for a construction service center, offices, a home improvement center; and down the line, more commercial and residential development. Does it make sense to do this when agricultural land elsewhere is highly contaminated with pesticides? No "studies" have to be done to find out the impacts of such a development.

San Jose is a prime example or even the mouth of the valley. When one parcel goes the rest follow like a house of cards. And, lest we forget, we are in our third year of a drought.

The earth is not getting any bigger. Collectively we must change our thinking. Conservation of these invaluable resources is the only way. In Thailand, Indonesia and Brazil, where the population explosion is now taking its toll on the environment, the people have realized they must work in concert with the fragile ecosystem.

Yes, the land seems abundant with opportunity here; but we must not be so shortsighted. It can be appreciated that the CVPOA works to save the residents money by keeping service centers within the valley; but when the quality of life is being strained to the limit it might ultimately be more wise to put this new service center in Seaside.

If, in the sad event, this land must be developed to avoid lawsuits why not develop it to benefit all? It could be reserved as park land (as is being done in Santa Cruz), or made into a large open and ecologically sound farming community open to the public.

As a community, we owe deep respect to this ancient valley. Let's not wait till the valley is destroyed before we act. It is our choice to keep the grandeur of the valley alive for all the world.

Insanity or indifference?

Dear Editor:

I am weary of the sight of macho males, rock 'n' roll blasting, tearing about in trucks with dogs in the back, freezing, exposed to wind and rain, heavy chains around their necks exactly long enough for the dogs to slide over the car's edge on a rapid curve and strangle. Why aren't the dogs up in front with their owners, safe and warm and comfortable, like their owners?

I am tired of dogs left out all night in the freezing cold of these freezing nights, in the rain, in storms, with no adequate shelter, while their owners sleep in warm comfortable houses. Why are the dogs not inside with their owners, safe, warm, and comfortable, like their owners?

Dr. Doolittle sang about the insanity of the human race in its treatment of animals. Insanity? Or indifference, ignorance, and just plain selfishness?

Otter Cove 'castle' construction to proceed

By DAVID LELAND

AN EMBARRASSED state Coastal Commission staff this week lifted a stop-work order on a controversial Otter Cove home, paving the way for summer completion and a diminished viewshed of the coast near Yankee Point.

Located about five miles south of Carmel, the four-bedroom, 7½ bath Tudor-style home, being built by Los Altos residents Terry and James Colo, has some residents convinced that they have been duped.

"It's the tallest house that exists now in Otter Cove," said Elaine Gloodt, a member of Monterey County's Highlands-Bixby Advisory Committee, which initially reviewed the plans. "I'm not sure that's the way the plans were when we saw them."

'The 30 feet must have been overlooked at the time, or we thought it was an error and that it was meaningless.'
— Lee Otter
— Coastal planner

Indeed, only an expert in the field of blueprints could decipher the vague starting elevation heights contained in the plans.

In this case, even professional planners at the state Coastal Commission were unaware that the starting elevation stated in the site plans could either be 16 feet or 30 feet above sea level, which is a difference of about one story.

"The 30 feet must have been overlooked at the time," said Lee Otter, coastal planner, "or we thought it was an error and that it was meaningless."

Asked what sort of sliding scale is typical for elevation levels in blueprints, Otter said, "Zero leeway is normal."

The Coastal Commission had "red-tagged" the construction site, as had the county, last week, after it was found that the Colos had removed the berm from their front yard and destroyed the landscape.

STATE AND county officials this week lifted a stop-work order on construction of a Otter Cove house owned by Jim and Terry Colo of Los Altos. Many neighboring residents remained dismayed at the home's height, which they feel is destroying the view of the coast. (Mac McDonald photo.)

Now the Coastal Commission has ordered the Colos to correct the damage that has been done to the terrain and not remove any more vegetation.

Otter said there is nothing that can be done about the height of the home and that the Colos did not "misrepresent" the project to the Coastal Commission, which would justify revoking the building permit.

"In our view the commission was not deceived about what it was going to get," Otter said.

Especially disconcerting to residents is the idea that the Colos, who said in public that they plan to live in the house, have the home up for sale with Del Monte Realty for $2.5 million.

Listed with the company's office in Pebble Beach, the 6,500-square-foot home is termed a "castle," with theater, library, walk-in butler pantry, wine cellar and "secret passageway" to a guest suite.

Moreover, the Colos advertised the property three years ago for $550,000 after their plans were approved by the county and Coastal Commission.

IN THIS instance, county planners merely approved plans given them by the Coastal Commission, and did not check them, according to Bob Slimmon, county planning director.

He added that, at that time, the Coastal Commission had complete jurisdiction of coastal planning in Monterey County. In December of 1987 the county adopted its own coastal implementation plan in an effort to keep local planning within the confines of Monterey County.

"Certainly this cannot be permitted to happen again," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman. "It's (Colo house) certainly not what we want to see along the coast."

'It's the tallest house that exists now in Otter Cove. I'm not sure that's the way the plans were when we saw them.'
— Elaine Gloodt

Many residents are now wondering whether the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan has the necessary teeth to stop the pristine coastline from disappearing.

With the Coastal Commission's staff having been cut to a skeleton crew by Gov. George Deukmejian, on-site inspections are rare and crucial issues can slip by.

"It makes you wonder if the rules are lessened today as compared to a few years ago," Gloodt said, adding that her group has been faithful to the LUP. "They are supposed to be getting tougher."

For Big Sur resident Lloyd Jones, the idea of how big a home should be is irrelevant to keeping the coast intact.

"The real concern of locals is the houses that won't be built as a result of protection," he said.

Even Otter agreed that now, more than ever, people need to pay attention to potential development along the Big Sur coast.

"If the residents think that because the LUP is in place they don't have to be vigilant, it just isn't so," he said.

Jim and Terry Colo did not return repeated phone calls from The Pine Cone.

CUSD fends off charges of parcel tax opponents

By DAVID LELAND

BACKERS OF a proposed parcel tax which would benefit area schools defended the measure this week, despite criticism from several Carmel Valley residents.

On March 7, the Carmel Unified School District will ask voters to approve Measure A, which would levy an annual tax of $80 on each parcel within the school district for the next four years.

The money would be used solely for capital improvements, such as replacement of several school buses that are in unsafe condition, asbestos removal and general repairs within the district.

'I never met a regressive tax that I like. It's not based on the ability to pay.'
— Graham Matthews Sr.

CUSD officials estimate that as many as a dozen of the district's 16-bus fleet may need to be replaced in the next few years, which would cost between $65,000 and $100,000.

If adopted, CUSD officials figure the parcel tax could net the district as much as $880,000 over the next four year years.

Under Proposition 13, the only way a school district can raise a parcel tax is by receiving a two-thirds vote for the measure. There are 11,000 parcels within the district and 19,000 registered voters.

Sparked in part by the recent endorsement of the parcel tax by the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, opponents of the measure argue that it is unfair that all parcels are taxed at the same rate.

"I never met a regressive tax that I like," said Graham Matthews, Sr., a valley resident since 1960. "It's not based on the ability to pay."

Matthews said that special districts are draining the taxpayers' pocketbook. He cited, as examples, the fire, park and recreation districts and the recent adoption last November of a paramedic assessment district.

"The trend is special tax," he said. "The poor pay the same as the rich."

Backers of Measure A acknowledge the built-in inequity of an across-the-board-tax, but say, under state law, that is the only way to raise the much-needed funds for capital improvements.

"Although there are inequities, most of the parcels are residential and are similar in (price) range," said CUSD Supt. Bob Infelise. "So the inequities are minimized."

Prior to the passage of Proposition 13 in 1978, each parcel was taxed at its assessed value, which could vary from year to year.

"Before Proposition 13 we could have had a general tax (for schools)," Infelise said. "That would have created a range of dollars."

NEVERTHELESS, AT press time, Matthews said he was exploring the idea of basing the parcel tax on a home square footage, instead of its appraised value.

"There is a lot more square footage than parcels," he said. "That way you could tax in smaller increments."

Matthews added that he certainly does not see anything wrong with trying to raise money for capital improvements in the district.

"It's not a question of the ends not being desirable, it's the method not being desirable," he said.

For longtime Carmel Valley resident Virginia Ford, the issue comes down to a restricted income.

"Most of my friends are on a limited income," she said, adding that one friend only receives $190 monthly. "I think there probably should be some income evaluation."

Ford suggested that for people who are older and have no children, the tax is unfair.

"We've all raised our families and paid school taxes for years," she said. "I think it's time for the older people who can't afford it to have a cut-off point."

She agreed that the $80 annually is a small price to pay for school improvements if the money is available.

"Eighty dollars to those people (who can afford it), is only a handbag at Macy's," she said.

Through the latest controversy, CVPOA officials believe that they continue to represent the majority of valley property owners.

"We think it's a just cause," said Dick Nimmons, immediate past president of CVPOA. "We feel the schools are important to property values and to the strength of the community."

Nimmons added that the CVPOA is trying to take a pragmatic approach to the limited methods of funding currently available to schools.

"We recognize the funding has dried up," he said. "This (parcel tax) is an investment in community health."

Supervisor's testimony a plea against offshore oil drilling

By DAVID LELAND

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman returned from the nation's capital this week vowing to continue the fight against any offshore oil drilling off the Central Coast.

Testifying before a Congressional Subcommittee on Interior Department Appropriation, Strasser Kauffman, serving as president of the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments, asked the committee to continue to intervene against offshore oil drilling.

"We insist on permanent protection and not just delays," said Strasser Kauffman, referring to short-term solutions reached thus far by Congress. "We have not seen any changes in the process as we go from one five-year plan to another. What's required once and for all is a permanent commitment to stop tampering with this coastline."

And while Strasser Kauffman said she enjoyed being in the Congressional gallery when President George Bush pledged an "indefinite postponement" of drilling of the state's northern and southern coastlines, that is not enough.

"I have some concerns that the divide-and-conquer philosophy will continue to haunt us," she said, referring to the administration's tact of breaking apart the state's cohesive anti-drilling coalition. "Any kind of negotiation must include the Central Coast."

Rep. Leon Panetta agreed with Strasser Kauffman.

"All of the lease sale areas, including Lease Sale 119 along the Central California coast must be given the same protection," he said.

Strasser Kauffman said she attempted to convince the committee that the area's economy and environment are at stake if offshore drilling is allowed.

"We need an outright moratorium and we have ample documentaion to support that," she said.

Currently AMBAG is writing a socio-economic analysis of the effects of offshore oil drilling, which will be ready later this year.

Strasser Kauffman said she also disagreed with the oil companies' claims that they want to do more studies off the coast.

"We have studies coming out of our ears that indicate that there are only a few days of oil supply, at best," she said. "We should not be willing to trade such little economic return for a burden on all future generations."

Planners say garage consistent with provisions of General Plan

By NANCY HILLS

AGREEING THAT a public use was "the highest and best use" for three city-owned lots on Lincoln Street, the Carmel Planning Commission voted unanimously that a proposed public/private garage project complies with general plan policies.

The vote keeps alive a proposal for a controversial joint project between the Pine Inn and City of Carmel to build a two-level, partially underground parking facility by combining the hotel's two lots on Monte Verde Street and three city-owned lots on Lincoln Street.

The commission also briefly reviewed other uses for the properties, but found that the parking garage either did not eliminate those uses or that it was a better choice.

"We have an opportunity to get cars off the streets," commissioner Jack Kennedy said, summarizing most of the commissioners' comments.

The commission's recommendation will go to the city council for final review later this year, possibly in March. If the council finds that the project does not comply with the general plan policies, it would be illegal to build.

The commission's and council's decisions, however, would not mean formal approval of the project itself.

The garage is designed to be one story above street level on Monte Verde Street and underground beneath the city's three lots on Lincoln Street. The Pine Inn would pay for the project and get the use of the lower portion of the garage for its use, about 49 spaces.

The city would receive the rights to use the area above ground. The number of parking spaces on the upper portion of the property will depend upon the project's design, but it will probably be around 40 spaces if the entire space is used for parking.

Both the Pine Inn and city properties are bounded on the south by Sixth Avenue. The city's lots were originally intended for a library annex, but the purchase of the Crocker Bank building in 1987, now the newly-opened library Park Branch, made that use unnecessary.

A proposal to combine the city and Pine Inn sites for a garage has been floating around since at least 1982, when then-representative for the Pine Inn, Alan Williams, proposed the garage as part of the library annex project.

That proposal failed, but was revived under Clint Eastwood's administration and the concept was eventually approved by the council. Not long after, the city began negotiations for the Crocker Bank building.

The Pine Inn and city lots are zoned single-family residential, though surrounded on three sides by commercial or public uses, including the Pine Inn, an art gallery and the Christian Science Church and its parking lot. On Monte Verde Street, two of the lots face residences.

OPPONENTS OF the proposed public/private garage tried to persuade the planning commission against finding the project in compliance with the policies of the general plan, maintaining that a parking garage is inappropriate for a residential zone.

Steven Brooks, representing the Carmel Residents Association, said, "Quoting from the Housing Element of the general plan, 'The sense of Carmel as a community has been increasingly damaged in the past quarter century by the disproportionate number of visitors in relationship to permanent residents.' "

A parking garage in the R-1 district only increases the damage done over the past few years, he said.

"We suggest several residential uses that would actually benefit from the central nature of the lots to shopping, eating places, library and buses," Brooks said.

The CRA had submitted a letter to the planning commission listing low-cost and/or senior housing, open space, residential care facility or community center.

Representatives from the Pine Inn were quick to reassure the commission and audience that they were interested in a project that would make everyone happy.

"Anyone who has worked with us knows that this is not an attempt by us to jam something down the throat of Carmel to make a profit or quick buck. We don't want to be confrontational," said Dan Russell, representing the Pine Inn.

The underground garage would be built to support any other project the city wanted to put on top, Russell said.

"This is not a way to expand the number of rooms in the hotel," Russell added.

The Pine Inn has 49 rooms.

Rental ordinance not in contempt judge has ruled

THE CITY'S new transient rental ordinance is not in contempt of court, Monterey County Superior Court Judge John Phillips ruled Feb. 10.

Phillips told attorney Anthony Lombardo that the new ordinance, which prohibits rentals in the residential district for less than 30 days, was "materially different" than a 1981 ordinance, the basis for the filing.

Phillips was careful to emphasize that he was not making any ruling about the constitutional issues raised by the lawsuit.

In 1982, the court agreed to an injunction against the enforcement of that ordinance and it was that injunction the plantiffs claimed the new ordinance, approved last December, violated.

Lombardo said they are ready to file a lawsuit against the ordinance itself if negotiations with the city are unsuccessful. The plantiffs would like the ordinance to change to prohibit rentals of a week or less.

The city is aware of that possibility, City Attorney Don Freeman said.

"I'm sure if they file a lawsuit that we will take whatever action we have to defend ourselves," Freeman said.

The plantiffs included Bruce Britton, part owner of San Carlos Agency, who had protested the ordinance when it appeared before the council.

"We're prepared to file the lawsuit against the ordinance itself," Britton said. "At this point we are trying to sit down with the city and identify the actual problems they have" with the rentals.

Britton said that they think of the city as their friend and have no wish to be in conflict with it.

Steelhead rescue effort doesn't produce any fish

By DAVID LELAND

WITH NO water in which to swim upstream, Carmel River steelhead trout were given a boost this week by mankind in hopes of saving the endangered fish — but to no avail.

This being the third year of below-normal rainfall, the Carmel River, which is a spawning ground for steelhead, does not have enough water to reach from the Carmel Lagoon out to the ocean so the fish can swim upstream and lay their eggs.

Taking nature into its own hands, the volunteer Carmel River Steelhead Association, state Department of Fish and Game and county Public Works Department bulldozed a path through the sand from the lagoon to the bay. Once the bulldozing was complete, fresh water was pumped into the bay to attract steelhead.

"The Carmel River Steelhead Association is the driving force," said Mike Berry, fish biologist with Department of Fish and Game. "Without them, this wouldn't have happened."

The work, which began Tuesday, was completed by midday on Wednesday. Sadly, workers only found a carp and a sculpin.

"We were hoping for 100 to 200 (steelhead)," said Berry, surveying the lagoon, which was cordoned off with massive fishing nets. "But if we had gotten 20 we would have been happy."

The fish were to have been transported by truck to the Salmon and Trout Project north of Santa Cruz to hatch their eggs.

Berry said the innovative effort may be repeated in early March.

While workers last year assisted steelhead out of the Carmel River, this is the first time an effort has been made to help the fish in.

"It had never been done on a grand scale like this," said Berry, adding that the drought has also lowered the water in other steelhead spawing grounds, such as the Little Sur River. "None of the streams are running well."

Berry stressed that, without intervention, the steelhead could become extinct in the Carmel River. The last time there was a "normal" run of steelhead was 1986.

After swimming into the ocean, it takes between two and five years for the steelhead to return to the Carmel River, Berry said.

If the path upstream is closed, the fish will "stray to another stream, absorb their eggs or be eaten by sea lions."

The last option may have already occured,

ASSISTING IN this week's effort to save the steelhead trout, the county Public Works Department bulldozed a path from the Carmel Lagoon to the ocean.

with a group of sea lions feeding off Carmel Beach precipitating this week's effort. The sea lions are now gone.

Berry ventured that the low tides and calm weather may also have played a part in the steelhead not entering the lagoon.

He added that it will take between seven and 20 inches of rain to bring the river up to a normal level.

The forecast for this weekend is for unsettled conditions with perhaps as much as one-quarter of an inch of rain, according to meteorologist Robert Renard.

SCENERY KILLERS TABOO

At a meeting of the National Committee for Restriction of Outdoor Advertising in New York, three names were mentioned of importance in the business world — Kirkman & Sons, the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, and the Pillsbury Flour Mills Company — as concerns which have come to the conclusion that money spent for advertising on billboards hurts rather than helps business, for the reason that the public is resentful against those who would commercialize all outdoors and desecrate natural scenery for their own selfish purpose.

The new building of the Bank of Carmel at the corner of Dolores and Ocean Avenue will not be ready for occupation until sometime early in April, according to present indications.

Bank officials said that the doors would probably be thrown open to customers "in about six weeks."

Scaffolding is down, the reinforced concrete building coated brilliant white, and much of the heavier equipment is installed. Main-floor equipment, however, is not yet completely installed.

Actual moving from the old building to the new is expected to be only an overnight affair.

SIERRA CLUB ALARMED AT PLAN TO OPEN RIDGE RD.

The Sierra Club and other conservation groups on the Monterey Peninsula are alarmed over the report that the U.S. Forest Service is planning to open to the public an existing one lane dirt road that commences at the Post Ranch several miles south of Big Sur State Park, rises to the crest of the range and continues south to the San Luis Obispo County Line. Forest Service officials state that this is part of a ten-year plan for the development of the National Forest, as it pertains to the Monterey District of the Los Padres National Forest.

Club members point out, however, that from sad experience they observe the irrefutable evidence in the Sierra Nevada, the Cascades and elsewhere in our land that when a road is put into an area that should be kept intact that this marks the beginning of a blight that ultimately destroys its beauty and usefulness.

CARMEL SCHOOLS TO LAY OFF TEACHERS

Carmel School district trustees will meet in special session next Tuesday to consider firing as many as 17 teachers and cutting back course offerings in the district to balance the budget next year.

District Superintendent Carl Wilsey said Tuesday night staff layoffs are the only way to wipe out a projected $585,000 budget deficit. The only other recourse would be eliminating district schoolbuses or charging parents a transportation fee.

Trustees are not expected to approve specific cuts when they meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Carmel Middle School library. But, under state lew, they have only 28 days until March 15 to notify any teachers who will be laid off next fall.

"LOW—COST" HOUSING FOR SENIORS WON'T BE CHEAP

A proposal to build "moderate-priced" housing for senior citizens on Carmel Valley land donated by actors Clint Eastwood and James Garner may not be as moderately priced as once hoped.

Bruce Moore, executive director of the Monterey County Housing Authority, told the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association Board of Directors Feb. 8 that monthly rent for the proposed 150-unit subdivision could be $600 if federal housing agencies do not chip in subsidies.

And Moore said the chance of a federal subsidy to supplement rents at the project would be "highly unlikely."

Pine Cone found itself in movement to pave highway

AMERICAN FLAGS fluttered on the paper's masthead starting April 5, 1917, as President Wilson's declaration of war commandeered page one. "Neutrality is no longer feasible or desireable where the peace of the world is involved," the president said. The paper called for a "PATRIOTIC RALLY" for "The Great Issue of the Day" at Manzanita Hall. Apparently everybody in town showed up. The Red Cross was the most popular cause and news of the war overtook the weekly "Pine Needles" feature. Theodore Criley, who had recently moved his family to Carmel Highlands after building the Criley Mansion now owned by Dan and Ellen Weiner, enlisted for overseas work with the YMCA and went to basic training at Stanford.

Conscription was instituted and June 5, 1917 was Registration Day for the young men of Carmel, many of whom were shipped off to the German front. The village didn't have a town flagpole, however, so the Pine Cone launched a subscription drive. "Every man, woman and child should contribute. About $50 is needed — quickly," it announced — and of course it wasn't long before Old Glory waved proudly over Ocean Avenue.

The Highlands Inn opened on July 28 that year and immediately became an important social center. The main lodge was a dining and dancing place and scene of public gatherings, while the small cabins accomodated the guests of the early Highlands families. World-renowned architects Greene and Greene designed the James house across the highway from the inn. Reporting on one "jolly informal dance," the Pine Cone opined, "To dine at the Highlands and spend the evening dancing at least once a week, possibly Friday, would be delightful."

Liquor consumption was discouraged, however, and Prohibition was around the corner. The Pine Cone sided with the teetotalers. "The Saloon Will Soon Be No More...It's a great food waste and weaking of our man-power and manhood. The saloon is doomed," editor Overstreet trumpeted. He may have been right for a time, but history brought Carmel fully back to the watering hole. Fine establishments like Bud Allen's Pub and Clint Eastwood's Mission Ranch see that today's Carmelian need never be parched.

As the year 1917 ended with the spectacular fire that leveled the Pebble Beach Lodge on Dec. 26, the Pine Cone was filled with letters from homesick servicemen and world travelers. The tiny village and its weekly magazine were a forum for great, worldly issues. Local playwright and author Perry Newberry contributed a series of touching dispatches from the front:

"I have seen its villages in every state of delapidation and destruction, from one end of France to its other extreme, and I have seen the French villagers so long German subjects that they speak a mongrel tongue. Also I have seen war — cold-blooded, hungry war — there have been vital moments when life was worth the living and death brought no fear...Give my love to all our friends. I wear my Carmel sweater day and night, also two pair of "Their" sox."

NOTED POET Herbert Heron opened the town's first bookstore in 1918, called simply the Carmel Book Shop. It was soon the favorite place for literary intellectuals to meet and stage readings and programs. Carmel was home to so many writers that three of them (Grace Sartwell Mason, Frederick Bechdolt and Harry Leon Wilson), appeared in the same week's edition of the Saturday Evening Post. "Some boost for the biggest little literary center in the universe, we'll tell the world," the paper crowed.

The library boasted almost 4,000 volumes and on Oct. 3, 1918, Mrs. Ralph Chandler Harrison made a generous gift in memory of her late husband, setting up funds for construction of the original Harrison Library building. "Spanish influenza" overtook the village that fall, to the point that the Carmel Board of Health required shopkeepers and clerks to wear a gauze mask. The town doubled its quota on Liberty Bond sales and celebrated the Nov. 11 armistice with "a huge bonfire celebration on Ocean Avenue — After that, young folks and old danced on San Carlos Highway."

The great war was over, and Carmel by the Sea turned back to its arts, its growth, its tranquility.

MARCH 20, 1919 brought the great news: "We Will Get Our Coast Road!" Of a $40 million state bond for new highway construction, $1.5 million had been set aside for the Carmel-to-San Simeon highway. "That was a great meeting in Sacramento last week. It means that California is about to take a great forward step," the Pine Cone enthused. Of course it would take a good many more years before the last link of the Coast Highway was in place, but the "bright forecast" for the future was clear. Carmel, once accessible from the south, would grow.

Speculators appeared around town and the real estate ads in the Pine Cone grew in number and sophistication. "Give This A Little Thought," contractor Percy Parkes advertised, "Carmel by the Sea, about midway between San Francisco and Los Angeles, is the ideal place to build a home." Midway to LA? You could buy five lots in city block 59 for $100 total from J.D. Bromfield. Publisher Overstreet editorialized that the Forest Theater gates needed fixing and complained that locals had become "indifferent" to the Carmel Mission and Forest Theater, now frequented by tourists.

As the Roaring '20s got underway, the population of Carmel by the Sea had risen to 750 permanent residents, and perhaps double that in the summer. Carmel was the most rapidly growing incorporated city in Monterey County. In just the first four months of 1920, the Pine Cone tabulated, 24 new buildings, 16 additions and seven garages went up. The total assessed value of the new houses was $55,349, an average of $2,306 each.

Now calling itself "THE OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY," the Pine Cone reported on the beginnings of daylight savings time and the Federal income Tax, and stumped hard for Hiram W. Johnson for president, later shifting allegiance to Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge when native son Johnson failed to get the nomination. Holman's Department Store of Pacific Grove opened a Carmel branch store (toasters were 19 cents each, "flat or pyramid"). The great director Eric von Stroheim came to Point Lobos to film the movie Foolish Wives.

No question about it, the 1920s opened with the village of Carmel, in peacetime prosperity, looking at a rosy future, and the weekly Pine Cone reaching into the furthest corners of the world, more influential and respected than large or commercial. The editor liked to quote an Indian poem, The Path of the Rainbow, about Carmel:

"Here was I chief ere the coming of the white man:
Now is his village spread from this sea beyond my sight."

CARMEL VALLEY OUTLOOK

By Grace Darcy

Fat Tuesday

MARDI GRAS, that time of carnival before Lent begins, is fascinating and exciting. Carmel Middle School teachers Dr. Jo Brazell (Language Arts), and Judy Doby (French), decided to combine their classes on Feb. 7 to give students an idea of what Mardi Gras is about and how it is celebrated around the world, including French Canada, South America, and Mexico.

On Shrove Tuesday, a sunny sparkling day, the two teachers held a "Middle School Mardi Gras" for their sixth and seventh-graders.

We attended the sixth-grade Mardi Gras. Some students dressed in costumes; others did not. They were told that Mardi Gras (which, in French, means Fat Tuesday), is usually celebrated during the last three days before Lent. The most famous Mardi Gras in the United States (after the middle school's celebration, of course), takes place in New Orleans. Natasha Belanger, a student of Cajun descent, shared her memories of a New Orleans Mardi Gras with her classmates.

Interestingly, Mardi Gras is called Pancake Tuesday by the English because fats, prohibited during Lent, had to be consumed before Lent.

With a noble assist from sixth-grade mothers Sharon Kattan and Robin Sutherlin, who brought skillets and bright-colored pancakes, the sixth-graders held their own pancake races on the lawn.

Winners of the preliminary races were Jessica Kattan, Kyle Nichols, Tiffany Bocanegra, and Mac Sutherlin. The winners then raced against each other, with Mac Sutherlin, who received a prize, an easy winner.

For the sixth-graders, Darren DeMayo held the title of Rex, and Amy Wang was Queen. David Barratt was King, and Rosamaria Munoz was Cosmos.

Later in the day, the seventh-graders celebrated Mardi Gras, with Joseph Fernandez emerging as pancake race champion. Alex Vorobiov was the seventh-grade Mardi Gras King; Sarah Frye, the Queen; Jon Karahale, Rex; and Alex Lewis, Cosmos.

Vice Principal Lisa Fraser was on hand to assist Ms. Doby and Dr. Brazell with the seventh-grade festivities, When it was over, participants and observers alike agreed it was a great day!

MANY CARMEL Valley residents attended the recent concert at Sunset Center of the Chamber Orchestra by the Sea, featuring the incredibly talented Camilla Wicks as violin soloist. Despite the crowds, we spotted Abida Khanum, Alice Kinsler, Shelly Schachter, and Paula Wainwright, music lovers all!

IT'S GOOD to know that 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman has recovered sufficiently from her very serious accident last December to be back on the job part time. She immediately took a position on the controversial proposal that the county terminate its city library contracts. "I strongly object to cuts in library service and elimination of city contracts," Strasser Kauffman told this reporter.

"I support continuation of city-county cooperation, not only because county residents frequently depend on the city facilities," she said, "but also because a strong regional library system serves everyone well, regardless of where they live."

She said that, rather than cut library funds, "we need to continue to support additional funding and inter-jurisdictional coordination so that this basic 'quality of life' service is not reduced."

Strasser Kauffman urges those interested in the vital matter of library support — as most Carmel Valley people are — to attend the public hearing scheduled for 10 a.m. on Feb. 28 in the board of supervisor's chambers, Salinas. Those who cannot attend are urged to contact the entire board of supervisors by mail and ask that their position be entered into the public record.

MANY CARMEL Valley residents have been stricken by the flu-like virus that affects people of all ages. On the road-to-recovery list are Mary Berta, Brent Buche, Philippa Hastings, Richard LaRue, Dan McGrew, Evelyn Nolt, Linda Olivier, Ann Olivier, Beattie and Art Warga, and Paula Wainwright. To these folks and to all who are ill, get well soon...we need you!

HAVE YOU noticed how many of our splendid oak trees along the Carmel Valley Road are dying? "So what?" say those who don't care. "So this," says the California Department of Fish & Game and other conservation organizations: Oak trees provide important food and cover for many wildlife species, including wild turkeys, deer, quail, and bandtail pigeons. Even fish benefit from the oak tree's shade. The spreading roots of oak trees help bind soil and reduce erosion on sloping soils. We need oak trees, not only for their beauty, but also to hold our world together. Can anyone possibly imagine our valley without its beautiful oak trees? I doubt it, but, Fish & Game warns, little by little, land clearing, firewood harvesting, and present management practices are taking their toll. A word to the wise?

THE CV Recreation and Park District (CVRPD) is joining with CV Community Youth Center (CVCYC) directors to co-sponsor a long-range planning program to develop a guide to future development and utilization of the community center, the park, and the swimming pool. Both organizations feel it is important for the community to input its ideas so that no potential use of merit is overlooked. Chuck McKay, president of the CVRPD, and Bob Heald, president of CVCYC, report that the acquisition of about 4 acres to the east of the existing grounds, and the approaching obsolescence of present facilities and equipment make the time right to come up with such a guide.

To this end, interested residents and organizations are invited to attend a brainstorming session on Saturday, Feb. 25, at 9 a.m. at the center. Those attending will be divided into four groups: (1) Community Center Building, (2) Park, (3) Activities House, (4) Swimming Pool.

The combined boards hope to incorporate the plans and ideas gathered at the meeting into a single document that will serve as a long-term guide to the development and improvement of the facilities. These general plans then will become specific plans for accomplishment as funding becomes available.

ON SATURDAY Feb. 11 the Carmel-by-the-Sea Volunteer Fire Department held its annual awards dinner. Each year the department honors members who have pursued their educational goals, and also recognizes volunteer firefighters for longevity.

During 1988, the members of the volunteer fire department participated in more than 1,100 hours of continuing education. A special presentation was made to Volunteer Fire Capt. Bruce Meyer for completing his Certificate of Achievement in Fire Science from Monterey Peninsula College.

Service awards were presented to the following volunteers:

Tina Borsella, 5-year pin; George Covell, 10-year pin; Carlos Maraver, 10-year pin; Buzz Cole, 15-year pin.

The highlight of the awards ceremony was the presentation of a 40-year service award to Volunteer Battalion Chief James Kelsey. Kelsey joined the department in 1949, and is the ranking volunteer officer in the department.

Q. I'M newly arrived in Salinas and live with my daughter and her family. My wife passed away last year after a long illness and it took me over six months to decide what to do, sell my house and move here with my daughter.

For the last few years I have cared for my wife and our home but before my wife's illness we often visited our community center. There I helped out by serving on the entertainment committee, arranged transportation for non-drivers and did some English-Spanish translating and interpreting. My daughter says I should get involved but I don't know anyone here or where to go. Can you advise me?

JT, Salinas

A. PUT on your running shoes because I can already hear the stirring of directors, chairpersons, coordinators etc., of the many wonderful agencies in Monterey County who would love to have you as a volunteer. I could give the names of a dozen agencies that would arm wrestle for you but to try to be fair I'll list three contacts and let you decide for yoursef: Volunteer Services Program, PO Box 202, Salinas, Ca. 93902 (758-8488); Alliance on Aging, 600 S. Main, Suite 7, Salinas, Ca. 93901 (758-0911); Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP), 971 N. Main, Suite 4, Salinas, Ca. 93906 (422-2979). My only advice might be to ease in and not take on too much until you are sure you can and want to handle the work.

Q. I'M 73 years old, widowed, live alone in my own home and drive my own car, although only locally in the daytime. My daughter wants me to stop driving and I would agree except that I fear losing my independence. My daughter says she will take me grocery shopping weekly when she does her main shopping and also will take me to other shopping or appointments. I have friends who will take me to the Meals on Wheels for lunch and other affairs, but it is the department store, hairdresser type of trips that I fear losing control of.

My daughter works five days a week and has several teenagers and a husband to care for so that I consider the grocery shopping trip all I want to ask of my daughter on a regular basis.

A friend suggested I shop by mail for things other than groceries and that she recently saw an excellent article in the paper about mail order shopping, its advantages and drawbacks. Can you give me any advice on this.

MS, Pacific Grove

A. I think the excellent article your friend referred to appeared in a December 1988 issue of the North Monterey County Fortnighter. You might contact the editor, Charmaine Cruchett at Box 1104, Castroville, CA 95012 (663-3939), to arrange for a copy. If you decide to shop by mail, I would suggest you use the larger, well-known companies as there can be pitfalls in dealing with someone many miles away.

New to you

DOWN ON Carmel Rancho Boulevard, The Hairspectacular, a full-service salon for men and women, has announced that Bruce Kolby has joined forces with owner Donna De Martini in providing the best in hair care.

Kolby brings to Carmel an extensive career in family hair care, and was trained at the St. Paul Barber College in St. Paul, Minn. Several years after graduation he also became a teacher at the school.

Along with studying with the masters of Europe, Kolby developed a specialized technique in childrens' hairstyling.

Also, Susanne Lehr and Betsy Shea have announced the opening of Interaction Associates, a business specializing in analyzing the processes, systems operations and problems of both new and established businesses and non-profit agencies.

The owners combine their varied backgrounds, as well as those of experienced specialists, to produce rapid and effective results for short-term projects.

Whether you need help in organizational start-up, publications, manuals, management and staff productivity, research projects, or fund-raising systems, Interaction Associates can solve your concerns.

For more information call 646-4512 or drop them a line at P.O. Box 221261 Carmel, CA 93922.

Moreover, local artist and former Carmel City Council candidate James Ogle has moved his place of business and renamed it, all in one fell swoop.

What used to be Ogle Gallery and Graphics on Mission at Ocean is now called California Art Supply, and is located at Eighth and Mission.

Don't be deceived by the name. While Ogle says he plans to have a full supply of art goodies in the near future, right now, most items need to be special-ordered — at 20 percent off list price.

What is consistent at the new location is the custom framing Ogle has become noted for, which is being offered at 25 percent off the list price.

One more. Attorney Ian McPhail has opened an office in Carmel at the southwest corner of Mission and Fourth.

McPhail, a Carmel resident, specializes in living trusts, wills and estate planning, including probate.

Who needs Broadway or Hollywood?

ANSWER: NOBODY who lives on the Monterey Peninsula. Why? because no matter what your entertainment preference might be, you're sure to find it delightfully produced locally.

Contrary to popular belief, "community theater" is not synonymous with "amateur productions." In fact, I'm told that local theaters rival those on Broadway. And theater doesn't always mean heavy drama, either, although if that's your preference, the Monterey Peninsula College Players (646-4213), are presenting Hugh Whitemore's drama Pack of Lies at the SRO Theater on the 16th, 17th and 18th. Village Wooing and The Man of Destiny are each one-act comedies by George Bernard Shaw playing back-to-back at the indoor Forest Theater in Carmel (624-1531), and the Grovemont Theater (649-6852), is presenting Glengarry Glen Ross, a comedy directed by local resident and former television actor, Jeremy Slate.

Oh, it's music you want! What's your pleasure? Of course, we're famous for the Monterey Jazz Festival (373-3366), but are you also a Dixieland Band buff? The Eighth Annual Dixieland Monterey event (443-5260), will kick off on the first weekend in March at 6 p.m. Friday, with several bands playing simultaneously over the weekend within easy walking distance from the Doubletree, and festivities include a Saturday parade in Monterey.

Baby, have you got the blues? If blues is your bag, the fourth annual Monterey Bay Blues Festival will be at the Monterey Fairgrounds in June. Call 394-2652 if you've got the blues bug. Appearances in the past have been made by Bobby "Blue" Bland, Taj Mahal, John Mayall, and Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown. Negotiations are currently underway with B.B. King, Etta James, Solomon Burke and other noted blues greats. At this year's event, the first Blues History Award will be presented to a deserving early blues artist. It will become an annual award.

The Monterey Pop Music Festival's annual blowout will be Sept. 29-30 and Oct. 1 at the Monterey Fairgrounds. This is a fabulous festival of pop(ular) music blends, and will include Patti LaBelle; Crosby, Stills and Nash, Kenny G, the Pointer Sisters and Jerry Garcia, as well as gospel, country/western and World Beat groups; truly a musical celebration. Call the chamber at 649-1770 for more information.

The Monterey County Symphony Association (624-8511), in addition to its "Symphonic" line-up, has added a Pops Series. Concerts included Dave Brubeck and "A Night in Spain" (a blend of music and dance), and an upcoming concert scheduled for April 15 will feature internationally renowned pianist, George Shearing. Tickets are available through Center Stage Ticketing, 649-5561.

Other entertainment in the arts available on the peninsula include opera, ballet and musicals, and speaking of Center Stage Ticketing, call them at 649-5561 for any information on actual or rumored events — they seem to know EVERYTHING going on locally. They are extremely helpful and generous with their information, even if they're not handling ticketing for a particular event, which is not likely since their coverage is so vast and complete. In fact, they are the local outlet for the national ticketing agency, Ticketron, which thrills me to no end in view of rumors I've heard that the Stones may be "considering" a summer concert tour! Oh, where DID I put those love beads?

Let's not leave out stand-up comedy! (No, I'm not referring to my "let's pretend we can cook" kitchen routine). The Club (646-9244), features both amateur and professional comics Friday and Saturday evenings in their Comedy Cellar and Sunday evenings upstairs, with dancing upstairs Friday and Saturday and after comedy on Sunday. The Boiler Room (373-1499), features professional comedians from all over the country Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, with a live band and dancing following the comedy show.

If you suspect that there's a comic inside of you just waiting to get out, you may wish to attend a one-day comedy workshop on June 25, conducted by former Bob Hope comedy writer, Gene Perret. This is a benefit for the Monterey County AIDS Association, and further information is available at 373-4325.

Again, I ask, who needs Broadway or Hollywood?

Cupids and Carnaval

BALLOONS POINTED the way to the Point Room of the Monterey Beach Hotel where colorful cupids, hearts, sounds of the Music Unlimited Band and more balloons welcomed guests to "Cupid's Caper" — a Friday fling for all ages as a benefit for Alliance on Aging.

Young singles (including a group of Marines), came for the "singles exchange" done in a light, humorous way to start conversations rolling. Diane Crystal (palm reader), gave answers to all who desired on "How To Handle Love Relationships." Betty Jackson, who has put her heart into matching hearts for three years with her Your Match biz said, "I've had a number of engagements, some 'going exclusively' and several happy marriages."

49ers star Del Rodgers was cupid's assistant and Sam Jaye solved the mystery of "Who or What Kidnapped Love?" after buying clues from Liz Gonzales and getting the winning clue from a Beatle's song Lonely People Need Love. Thus, the correct answer was "loneliness." Her prize — three days at Tahoe High Sierra.

The "Caper" party dispelled the loneliness of several newcomers to the peninsula, the young met new friends for the evening, as well as married couples making new acquaintances. It was truly a community mixer of all ages. The end result was a genuine good time for all.

The event chair was Carol Russell and Valentine decorations were creditied to Margarite King with help from Edie Karas, Morley Brown and others.

APPARITIONS APPEARED SATURDAY evening in Carmel — animate, inanimate, phantom and phantasm. The Photography Center of MP at Sunset Center was alive with costumes, masks, mystery, illusion, fun and photographs of carnival times.

The "Carnevale di Venezia" was brought to an end abruptly by invader Napoleon Bonaparte in 1797, but it has been brought back to life both in Venice and in Carmel. A carnival atmosphere seems to fascinate people here as much as it does in Europe. It is fun to don a mask, bringing an immediate new identity, if ever so fleeting and temporary. If a full costume is added, the magic and illusion is even more dramatic.

Those who attended the reception for the new photo exhibit in costumes and masks had great fun. Those who didn't wished they had, as they viewed the color photos of Pete Goode of Carmel along with the photographic anthology of the Venice carnival by Pearl Mar and Rainer Lohman of Munich, West Germany. A special air of mystery and intrigue prevailed.

Planning the gala opening were Mary Frost, Marilyn Owen, Nancy Benham, Pete Goode, Richard Rombach, Roger Fremier and Gail Pierce.

"LOVE YOUR MUSEUM Art & Treasures Auction" has been held for four years at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History and this year's catalog was chock full of treasures displayed on walls and in cases.

A first edition of Steinbeck's Sweet Thursday, an early 1900s wedding dress of satin and lace with Japanese embroidered butterflies, brought $170. Necklaces from Mexico, India, Thailand, Etc., a carving from Siam, Japanese prints, bonsai, ceramics, imari and silk brocade dolls, tapestries and wall hangings from Africa, Peru and Europe, and on and on.

Auctioneer Dan Turrentine found it easy to stimulate bidders for the beautiful framed artworks by John Cunningham, Carol Grigg, Margaret Roberts, Will Bullas, Olaf Dahlstrand, Vern Yadon, Joan Savo, William S. Stone, Jr., Donald Teague, Alex Anderson and others. Everyone entered the auction room content following elegant refreshments by local restaurants and wine provided by Paul Masson Museum.

The museum board members with Arthur Hayler as president use the money from this annual fund-raiser to bring free quality exhibits to the county and the peninsula. Around $11,000 was gained this year. Mrs. Louise Hayler was auction chair.

ARTIST LEWIS Kesling said at the opening of his one-man show at the Monterey Conference, "I search that sea of self and am concerned with the relationship of my own self with the universe. What is it all about? Where do I fit in?"

The paintings of this intense colorist are expressionistic canvases with such titles (also labeled in Greek): Urban Paranoia I, II and III, Memorabilia - Lila, Rejoice, Malice.

Mr. Kesling's art has been shown in New York, Paris, Pittsburg, Japan, Germany, Ohio, West Virginia, and Carmel. Among his teaching posts have been universities in Ohio, West Virginia and locally at the Monterey Lyceum and Del Mesa Carmel.

Speaking of his late friend, artist Lily Trube of Carmel, he said, "Flowers are not for the dead."

The exhibition is made possible by the Barnet Segal Charitable Trust and the MP Museum of Art. This striking stylistic show will be up through March.

County it is necessary to have funding. With smiles of the recipients lighting the room, the Monterey County Cultural Council had the pleasure of distributing $118,723 to arts organizations at a reception in La Mirada Adobe.

Roderick L. Dewar, MCCC president, thanked the county board of supervisors for continued support of the arts. The regranting panel was headed by Jim Bennett, with these committee members making the decisions: Robert Abinante, Jack Bower, Kate Dieterle, Ruth Fenton, Scott MacClelland, Dee Meyers, and Diane Rowe.

Grants, matching grants and project grant checks were presented by Marc Del Piero and Sam Karas with $54,850 going to music groups; $18,050 to theatre; $29,730 to visual art and $16,093 to literature, media and multi-disciplinary.

Some of our oldest cultural groups were among the 26 chosen. The Carmel Bach Festival (53 years), received $11,900, accepted by Anne Schoville; Michael Winter received $13,350 for the 45-year-old Monterey County Symphony; Pat Kerman received $4,400 for the Carmel Music Society (62 years); Marcia Hovick of Children's Experimental Theater (30 years), received $5,000; Peter Newman received $1,350 for the 69-year-old Forest Theatre Guild; Rob Collins received $2,000 for the 40-year-old Carl Cherry Foundation.

A few of the others: Michelle Noseworthy received $13,700 for Youth Music Monterey; basso profundo Daniel J. Dresner received $2,700 for Camerata Singers and Stephen Moorer $7,700 for Grovemont Theatre. John Strolle of KAZU radio $2,950; Dr. Richard Solix took $1,000 for KHDC radio; Jon Style received $5,900 for Lyceum of MP and Marsha Kraus $3,100 for KUSP radio.

Wine and hors d'oeuvres were served by the MCCC board members.

THERE'S AN ART to sipping the correct wine with a well-chosen menu and savoring it with friends in a warm cozy dining room.

There is an art to timing as well. Although the president of the International Wine and Food Society of the Monterey Peninsula was elected in August, the official President's Dinner wasn't held until Feb. 7 in a new setting — Club XIX, The Lodge at Pebble Beach.

President for 1988, Dr. Thomas Ainsworth, Jr., and his wife Sandy, were chairpersons and '89 president is Dirk van der Burch. Although there was concern about space for the champagne sipping prior to the dinner, as it turned out, there was ample room for the 51 members and guests.

Club XIX offered the perfect warmth and coziness as well as a delicious dinner prepared by the youthful chef Bradley Jones. He received bravos and applause at the end of the dinner and he thoughtfully brought out his staff for their share of the kudos as well as Maitre d' Michael Zaouk. Intimate entertainment was harp music by Amy Krupski.

Society sommelier, Dr. William Snell, enlightened guests regarding wines selected for the seven-course dinner. Napa Valley Markham Sauvignon Blanc 1987 was chosen to go with the Salmon Paillard and Glazed English Cucumbers in Mussel Broth (which was a unanimous favorite.) It followed an absolutely delicious Chicken Broth flavored with Truffle and Puilly Fume.

Joseph Phelps Cabernet Sauvignon 1985 (Napa), was delicious with "The best roast loin of lamb I ever had," as Burney Threadgill put it.

Dr. Snell assured us that the dessert wine, Chateau Suduiraut 1983, Sauternes, was "right next door to Chateau d'Yquem," adding, "It will be better in 20 years." So, why open it now? The answers: "a bird in hand" and "we won't be here then."

FUTURE FUN. Dinah Shore is coming to Pebble Beach and she is going to sing! "Life Savers Committee" is arranging a return to the fabulous '50s with classic (cholesterol) cheeseburgers laced with sodium, real French fries, Coca-Cola in real Coca-Cola bottles, carhops on roller skates, poodle dog skirts, saddle shoes, white bucks, bobby socks, pony-tails or duck-tails with butch wax, jitterbugging, and the works.

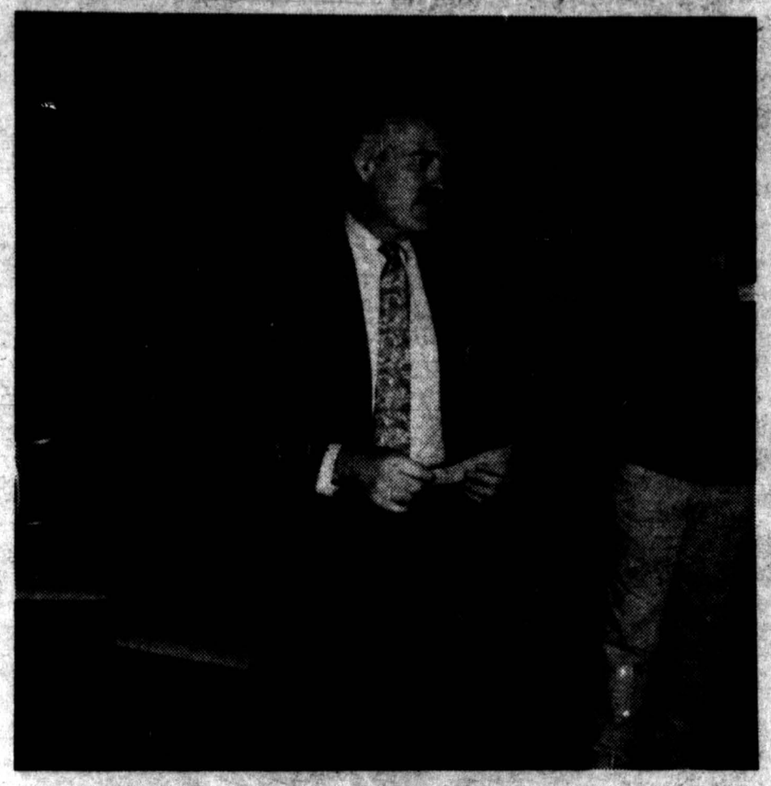
Hang in there 'til April 22 when "Mel's Drive In" opens, complete with vintage Fords, Mercurys and Chevys at The Lodge in Pebble.

Eighteen dynamic fellas and gals make up the Life Savers Committee to save the lives of adolescents from the number two killer — suicide.

Those who remember the 1950s will love the nostalgia and for those who don't, it's a chance to experience the decade of lighthearted fun.

PAT KERMAN, as treasurer of the Carmel Music Society, accepted a check from Marc Del Piero, Sam Karas and MCCC president Roderick Dewar. (Chuck Scardina photos.)

STEPHEN MOORER, GroveMont Theatre founder and executive director, shook hands with Sam Karas after receiving a grant for his organization. Marc Del Piero is in center.



JOHN STROLLE, acting president of KAZU board, accepted a grant check from MCCC at La Mirada.

BEA TOMLINSON was pleased with the check from MCCC she received from supervisor Marc Del Piero.

ONLY THE FIRST 150 reservations will be accepted for "A Taste For Art." A gourmet buffet/auction designed to tickle the palate and complement the Monterey Wine Festival. Frederick Stanley Heads the Jesters fund-raiser for the MP Museum of Art. He will be assisted by Dr. William Snell and other wine and party-loving Jesters.

The gourmet buffet will be set up by 6 o'clock March 10 in La Playa Hotel and the auction will feature opportunities to bid on the talents of five local professional chefs with wine and wine-related items also on the block. MP Museum's own private label of 1986 wine will be featured. Send your $35 (if member), or $40 (non-member), to the museum by March 6th.

"WATERTOWERS AND TUMBLEWEEDS" is the Feb. 24th program for Carmel Art Association. An introspective view of Mendocino and Brodie through the eyes of the artist William F. Stone, Jr. The evening of slides, accompanied by music, begins at 7:30 focusing on two interesting artistic California communities.

The laid-back artists' colony of Mendocino on the northern coast is noted for its picturesque watertowers. Bodie is a deserted silver mining town on the Eastern slopes of the Sierra.

PHOTOGRAPHING CHILDREN

Capturing the charm and spontaneity of children is one of the joys of photography. While their lack of self-consciousness makes them excellent subjects, children respond best to those they like and trust. If a child doesn't know you, you may need time to get acquainted before taking good pictures.

Try to use natural light, if possible, since the distracting discharge of a flash can interrupt a mood. A fairly bright day, outdoors or in a sunny room, will give you the flexibility to use a fairly fast shutter speed.

Pictures taken at eye-level have great appeal. This often means squatting down to shoot. But first, give children time to become comfortable with the camera's presence. They'll reward you with photographs you'll treasure.

You'll always find a camera pro ready to help you improve your pictures at Blue Ribbon Photo, where we can make your shots into beautiful 4"x6" prints in less than 1 hour.

Donors may contact the Salvation Army pick up service in Monterey County by calling the toll-free number, (800) 336-4900. Offers to the Salvation Army are still tax deductible, and receipts are available to donors for tax purposes.

Factory-sponsored ownership

By Jim Johnson

AUDI'S PROTOCOL is overwhelming. Over the years it has won countless races and gathered more automotive achievement design awards than most manufacturer's trophy cases can display. Innovative design, centered around a do-more-for-less theme, has kept product demand and reputation among the highest in Europe.

Tried and convicted by the American press, overlingering malaise centered on the unintended acceleration controversy, Audi's sales have plummeted by 65 percent in the United States over the past few years. Even as a media insider who knows the facts, (several other manufacturer's cars have had occurences), the backwash from bad press had impacted my opinion of Audi.

Preparing for a week's run with a press pool Audi 100 Quattro, I updated my Audi knowledge while at the same time focused on the positive points of Audi. In short, I needed a self-induced attitude adjustment.

Not since the late Mark Donahue dominated Can-Am racing in a Penski-prepared Porsche 917, has a manufacturer dominated its class the way Audi has with both Ralley and Trans-Am racing. They were so successful in Trans-Am with their production-based car that the rulemakers are trying to legislate them out. Experts equate 2,000 miles of rallying to 300,000 miles of normal driving stress. The least expensive car to maintain that I have owned was a 1976 Audi Fox Wagon. It required one valve job and brake pads in addition to normal maintenance in more than 200,000 miles of ownership. My father, a General Motors man, will not part with his 1972 100 LS. He does not need a cellular phone to call roadside service.

Even with positive recall, I could not muster much enthusiasm for the black 100 Quattro's arrival. The 100-200 series wagons and sedans are essentially the slippery (drag coefficient .032), 5000 body with new interiors and 1400 redesigned and upgraded parts. Both use the same 2.3-liter 5-cylinder work-horse engine. The 200 gets leather interior and 32 extra horsepower via turbocharging. The 80/90 series, which arrived late in 1988, are all new replacements for the popular 4000 series. In addition to the 80's features, the 90 interior is finished with leather and uses the 130-hp, 2.3-liter 5-cylinder as opposed to the 80's 2.0, 108-hp, 4-cylinder engine. All models bearing the Quattro designator are all-wheel and equipped with Torsen (torque sensing), center differential.

My check-out run in the 100 Quattro was a round-trip sprint to the Bay Area and back. Like its ancestors, the 130-hp engine required prudent use of the 5-speed transmission and RPMs to maintain respectable power. At freeway speed-plus, it ran as quietly and smoothly as a BMW 7 series and offered as much comfort and control.

The following morning, with co-pilot on board, it was off to Yosemite. Running 154 between Pacheco Pass and Highway 99 at even faster speeds reinforced my initial roadability impression. Over sustained periods of high-speed driving, the Audo 100 is virtually stress-free.

The Quattro is as comfortable traversing over slick, icy roads as it is on dry pavement at speed. Audi's all-wheel, torque-sensing differential delivers driving force to the wheels with the grip. Dropping from the summit to the floor of Yosemite Valley on slippery pavement, acceleration repeatedly brought the Quattro back on line after it started to skid. Audi's standard anti-lock brakes are a natural partner for all-wheel drive. As I walked toward the lobby of the rugged Ahwahnee Hotel, I glanced back at the black Quattro with respect. Its adaptability to extremely different driving environments was remarkable. My indifferent attitude was being silenced.

By check-out time Sunday, I was familiar with the equipment and anxious to run the first leg of our rally home. By putting its power down with balance, the Quattro tracks through snow and ice as if it was on dry pavement. Underway, the sight of bobbing passengers and the sound of thumping tires from 4-wheel drive vehicles signaled prey. Tracking, one by one, the quiet Quattro passed every one en route. For the second leg of our rally, I turned the wheel over to my co-pilot. A skier and accountant for the U.S. Ski Team, she as no stranger to all-wheel-drive. At first she was cautious, like a downhill racer testing a pair of new skis. Within minutes, she was exceeding twice the allowable speed limit. Her comment, with a smile: "This car computes."

Audi's Advantage Warranty program makes assurances and commitments a top flight race driver might receive in the form of a factory-sponsored "ride." For the new Audi buyer/recreational driver, Audi pays for all mechanical operating expenses excluding gas for three years or 50,000 miles. Also when it is time to trade your old ride in one a new Audi, through a resale index, it guarantees your trade-in's resale value proportionally to that of Volvo, BMW and Mercedes.

In a week's trial, the black Quattro transplanted my Audi attitude. The Audi 100/200 series in one of three best high speed luxury sedans/wagons sold in the United States. Audi Quattros are the best performance all-wheel drive vehicles sold in the world. Exonerated by the court, why does Audi offer a factory-sponsored ride to recreational drivers/buyers? Simply: "In today's extremely competitive selling environment, building customer loyalty and strengthening repurchase intentions are essential to our success. That's why we developed the Audi Advantage."

The California oak moth is getting an early start this year. The larvae have been found active throughout the area.
This is the third consecutive year the oak moth has been active in this area and defoliation this year combined with the stress of having inadequate rainfall in recent years may threaten the life of an oak tree.
If the larvae are present on your trees, it is best to stop them before they do further damage. If you are concerned about your oak trees, call Ailing House Pest Control now.

Seniors program needs participants

Carmel Police Department's "Seniors Helping Seniors" program has need for two types of seniors: those who would like to help and those who desire help.

According to Cathy Dampier, desk officer, there are seniors who are looking for some type of community involvement to donate their time and others who are lonely, "shut-ins," or are "at-risk" due to medical or physical reasons and desire contact with someone who cares about their welfare.

Under the program, senior volunteers call participants of the program by telephone from the Carmel Police Department. If for some reason the recipient doesn't answer the phone, the volunteer alerts the police dispatcher and a patrol unit is sent to check on the participant's welfare. To be effective, calls are made at about the same time every day, Dampier said, but the seniors aren't restricted to their homes. If they plan to be gone, they merely notify the police department in advance.

Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer or a recipient of the "Seniors Helping Seniors" program is encouraged to call the Carmel Police Department at 624-6403.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Without God we can do nothing

Carmel Pine Cone
Mar.12, 1981

Let us pray: Oh almighty and eternal God, Father of love and kindness, help us to know Thy will and knowing it to have this courage to act as loyal sons for it is only by a life of unstinted service that we can serve Thee.

Some people will produce only when they are showered with praise and when verbal gratitude is heaped upon them. We call them prima donnas.

Man is meant to earn his living by the sweat of his brow. We are designed to work, just as a cloud is meant to bring rain, and rose bushes to bear roses.

When we try to live without God we are unhappy. The only way we can possess God is to serve our fellow man. Problems often crop up which block our road to service: ill health, worries and family problems.

Often we use up our energies in feeling sorry for ourselves and complain of a heavy load. We gripe that we are being let down by God and the world. The solution is to get on with the job.

Without God we can do nothing. With him there is nothing we can't do. So let's get off the dime and on with the job of serving others above self.

Alvert Schweitzer, the saintly doctor and honorary Rotarian, wrote that service insures happiness.

Father Hesberger says service is paying our dues for being a human being.

St. John, the gentle and beloved disciple, minces no words: "If anyone says, 'my love is fixed on God,' yet he hates his brother, he is a liar." That is a clear enough message for even Archie Bunker to grasp.

And let's pray that you and I get the message as well.

Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

The heart of an older person appears to pump about as well as that of a young adult, and any problems related to the older heart's ability to move blood may be considered the effect of disease, not aging. That is just one of the findings of research sponsored by the National Institute on Aging (NIA) since its establishment in 1975.

First he helped to organize the Texarkana Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons and became its first president. But his interests are much broader. At one point he served on the boards of 19 organizations! Among his latest doings: organizing current events classes for seniors. "Staying useful will keep you young," Sexton says.

CRITIC AT LARGE

By Mac McDonald

IT TOOK a while, but I finally managed to track down most of the major Oscar nominations for 1988, which were revealed at 5:30 a.m. (PST) Wednesday.

You see, we don't have the benefit of the AP wire service machine (or any other wire machine for that matter), so it was a case of piecing together the nominations from the networks, CNN, radio news shows and a few well-placed phone calls. Oh sure, you could get a listing of all the nominations today in some other newspaper, but what fun would that be? Besides, the Pine Cone is free.

Most of the nominations were fairly obvious, but, as usual, there were a few surprises, most notably Edward James Olmos for Best Actor (Stand and Deliver), Martin Scorsese for Best Director (Last Temptation of Christ), and River Phoenix for Best Supporting Actor (Running on Empty).

And, as usual, there was more emphasis on who didn't get nominated than on who did, ranging from the absence of Lawrence Kasdan (Accidental Tourist) and Stephen Frears (Dangerous Liaisons) from the Best Director list; William Hurt (Accidental Tourist), Shirley MacLaine (Madame Sousatzka), Susan Sarandon (Bull Durham), Christine Lahti (Running on Empty), Bob Hoskins (Who Framed Roger Rabbit), and especially Barbara Hershey (for A World Apart) missing in action on actors' categories.

Locally the biggest disappointment has to be the almost complete ommission of nominations for Clint Eastwood's labor of love, Bird. The film, its stars (Forest Whitaker and Diane Venora) and its director have all already won awards in a variety of film critics circles worldwide. But the only nomination Bird could garner was a token one for Best Sound. It appears that Hollywood isn't quite ready to accept Eastwood as a serious director just yet.

Now for the major nominations and some comments:

• For Best Picture: Rain Man, Dangerous Liaisons, Mississippi Burning, Working Girl, and The Accidental Tourist. A mostly safe, white bread, mainstream selection of films, even Missippi Burning, which chose to focus its story on two white FBI agents rather than the black residents of the town. No big surprises here, although Who Framed Roger Rabbit, the big hit of the year, is absent. Fortunately, all five films are in area theaters now, and with their nominations, most are likely to stick around for a while.

• Best Actor: Dustin Hoffman for Rain Man (no big surprise), Gene Hackman (Mississippi Burning), Tom Hanks (Big), Max Von Sydow (Pelle the Conqueror), and Olmos. Sydow and Olmos are definite dark horses.

• Best Actress: Glenn Close (Dangerous Liaisons), Melanie Griffith (Working Girl), Jodie Foster (The Accused), Meryl Streep (A Cry in the Dark), and Sigourney Weaver (Gorillas in the Mist). A banner year for women; there were so many good performances someone had to get left off.

• Best Supporting Actress: Frances McDormand (Mississippi Burning), Geena Davis (Accidental Tourist), Michelle Pfeiffer (Dangerous Liaisons), Joan Cusack and Sigourney Weaver (Working Girl).

Rain Man got eight nominations, Dangerous Liaisons garnered seven, Mississippi Burning seven, Roger Rabbit and Working Girl six, Gorillas in the Mist gained five, Accidental Tourist was named four times and — surprise! — Die Hard got four nominations, mostly in the technical categories.

That's it for the majors. Search your local daily newspaper for more detailed listings, such as Best Screenplay Adapted from Another Medium and others. The Oscars are set for March 29.

Newly formed Big Sur Players stage raw drama

By ANNE PAPINEAU

THE SETTING: a New York bar. Enter two down-and-outers speaking Brooklynese. In the course of a couple of hours, their words and actions reveal the nature of their lives.

This drama, Danny and the Deep Blue Sea, was written by John Patrick Shanley, who also scripted the hit film, Moonstruck. Shanley's 1984 play is the first production of the Big Sur Players. Ironically, the idea for this new theater troupe took form in the barrooms of Big Sur, and was launched as a kind of alternative to the bar scene.

"We want to put on some contemporary plays and offer something besides bars and VCRs for night life in Big Sur," observes Perham Slate, who portrays the title character in the play. Slate has tackled acting roles locally and in New York City, and is also a musician and singer for the band, Canyon. Coincidentally, for nearly 12 years he has tended bar at Nepenthe in Big Sur.

Kim Candler's background is also in theater, having trained at the Beverly Hills Playhouse, the Attic Theatre in Hollywood and the City Literature Institute in London. She was recently seen in The Early Girl at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center in New Monterey. Candler works as a waitress at the River Inn — another Big Sur restaurant and watering hole.

It was at Fernwood in Big Sur that Candler and Slate were discussing staging a play at the Grange Hall. They were overheard by David Bentley, who had experience working in theater and film in Toronto, Canada. Bentley had seen Danny and the Deep Blue Sea in Vancouver, and volunteered to direct the Big Sur Players' first production.

Danny and the Deep Blue Sea previews Wednesday, Feb. 22 and formally opens Thursday, Feb. 23 in the Big Sur Grange. If their first project flies, the Big Sur Players hope to organize a theater company that will involve locals both young and old.

"The Grange is very reasonable to rent and it's a two-person play, so we can build a small set," explains Candler. "We hope to get back our initial costs. We're not trying to make any money. We're doing all the publicity and acting."

The characters Candler and Slate portray in this 1984 drama are described by the playwright as "violent and battered, inarticulate, yearning to speak, dangerous and vulnerable." The duo, Roberta and Danny, meet in an empty New York bar late at night.

Act II begins in Roberta's room, "in her bed — after the (f)act of love-making, which is the beginning of the awkward and painful struggle to dissolve their hardened social stances — at least temporarily — so that an intimacy and a sharing might occur."

The language is rough, earning the play an "adults-only" rating.

"Our next play will be PG-rated for kids," Candler says.

"We wanted to do something serious for Big Sur," Slate explains. "There have been revues staged in the Grange, but lately no serious dramas. Our objective is to start a small theater in Big Sur — put on summer plays and offer workshops for children."

Slate said that he hopes to enlist the talents of his father, veteran film and television performer Jeremy Slate, to direct a production for the Big Sur Players.

"It's a lot of work, and he's been busy making films in San Jose," Slate notes.

Both Slate and Candler currently reside in Pacific Grove, and commute on Highway 1 to their jobs in Big Sur.

"The drive is different every day," he says.

They have both lived in Big Sur, and Slate says he plans to move back in May.

Danny and the Deep Blue Sea has enlisted other local talent. Danny Cook, who works as a cook at Fernwood, will play his original guitar compositions between acts. The play is stage managed by Judy Share, who also works at Nepenthe.

"This is the test play," Slate explains. "If we get good community reaction, we'll keep trying."

For reservations, call 372-9308.

THE NEWLY FOUNDED Big Sur Players will stage their first production, Danny and the Deep Blue Sea, at the Big Sur Grange Hall. Photographers train their lenses on Venice

By ANNE PAPINEAU

FATE SEEMS to have played a role in the exhibit of images by three artists at the Photographic Center Gallery in Carmel.

The subject of the show, continuing through March 26, is the Venice carnival, or "Carnevale di Venezia," which draws thousands of visitors annually to the canal-laced city. Its picturesque values are not lost on photographers, who each seek their own ways to capture the magical quality of the pre-Lenten revelry.

Pete Goode of Carmel and Pearl Mar and Rainer Lohmann of Munich, West Germany, have each travelled, cameras in tow, to the Carnevale di Venezia. The photographs they make are highly individual interpreations, Goode choosing to work in color, Mar and Lohmann seeing in black and white.

Last year the European-based team visited Carmel as part of their vacation and sought out the Photographic Center.

"We visited the Photographic Center and saw the Robert Capa show. That was actually the first show I installed at the Munich Fotomuseum," explained Lohmann, who is curator of the museum in West Germany. While in Carmel, they spotted a single, haunting image of the Carnevale di Venezia made by Pete Goode.

Coincidentally, Mar and Lohmann had assembled a collection of prints that interpret

MUSIC CORNER

By Jo Ann La Torra

Dessert-like trio played by County Symphony

IF ONE is prone to using metaphors for music that have to do with edibles, as some of us are, the recent program offered by the Monterey County Symphony was made up of three desserts. The first of the series was heard at King Hall in Monterey on Sunday, Feb. 12

The program opened with Essay No. 2 by Samuel Barber. A pleasant piece, with pretty melodies, rich harmonies and non-disturbing rhythms, it made a good curtain-raiser. There were some lovely sonorities in it, and much of the wind playing was highly commendable.

Violinist Aaron Rosand joined the orchestra for the Second Violin Concerto of Wieniawski. Once very popular, this work is seldom heard now, at least partly because the style of playing required is no longer fashionable. Wieniawski was one of the legendary virtuosos of the 19th century whose stock-in-trade was to dazzle the audience. His compositions are designed in the same way — lots of flashy business, but precious little content. If that style of composition and playing is your dish of tea, this would have been enjoyable.

Mr. Rosand returned to play "The Furies," by Ysaye, another violinist/composer of the same ilk, which had even less musical content, but a lot of notes.

After intermission, the orchestra played the Second Symphony of Rachmaninoff. One could hardly say this was devoid of musical content, but Rachmaninoff's gifts were not well suited to large forms, as they tend to get episodic and repetitive. The orchestration was interesting. Rachmaninoff knew how to blend the orchestral colors for unusual and beautiful effects, especially with the large wind section. Solo passages were sharply etched, instrument families made large statements, and combinations produced some very effective moments.

Clark Suttle did a very satisfactory job with the orchestra in some difficult music. For the most part, they sounded very good. There were a few places in the Wieniawski where attention might have wandered off, resulting in careless intonation and some overly exuberant brass. The control was better in the Rachmaninoff, although the string section is not yet melded into a true choir sound. Nevertheless, it has a pleasant richness that provides a good foundation on which to build.

Next time, perhaps a leaner cuisine?

Entries accepted for fourth Big Sur Marathon

Entry forms for the fourth presentation of the Big Sur International Marathon, set April 23, are now available through the marathon office at 625-6226 or P.O. Box 222620, Carmel, CA, 93922-2620.

More than 1,500 entries have been received to date, almost double over last year at this time, and a record 33,000 have been mailed upon request to runners around the world. The field is limited to only 3,000 runners.

The scenery of the 26.2 mile course (from Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park to Rio Road at Carmel's Crossreads shopping center) has brought acclaim from running circles for this relatively young race.

Last year's winner, Mike Lundblad of Lake Tahoe, ran the rolling course in 2:33:18.

Featured on the 1989 entry is a "name the mascot" contest for a wayward cow unofficially adopted by the runners during 1987's race. Submissions to date nclude "Udder Exhaustion", "Moomoo Cowdafy", "Chips", "Big Surlion", and the race director's favorite so far, "Rosa Moota".

For further information, contact the marathon office.

A bus stop has been installed on Highway 1 at Ocean Avenue in front of the school.

"There has been a long-term need for service to the high school, and I am pleased that we will be able to provide that service," explained Frank J. Lichtanski, general manager of Monterey-Salinas Transit. The line 4-Carmel Rancho bus will serve the high school as it returns to Monterey via Highway 1.

Telephone transit information is available by calling Monterey-Salinas Transit at 899-2555 or 424-7695.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Desperately seeking Aretha

THERE'S AN amazing story in circulation today. As the cosmic timetable would have it, the tale hits us during Black History Month.

Tobacco heiress Doris Duke remains one of the planet's richest women. Theoretically, at least, she "has everything." But the Doris Duke profile run recently by a national magazine says she once sought the identity of — Aretha Franklin.

An "old friend" reported that Miss Duke went through her "Aretha phase" in the early '70s. She wore a black wig and sang with Baptist choir members at Nutley, New Jersey. Moreover, she would stand before a Louis XIV mirror and practice Aretha's smash tune about natural womanhood. "She wanted to be Aretha Franklin," said the less than gallant Leon Amar, "but she sounded like a rooster with laryngitis."

His cruelty's obvious and not the main point. While the article treats her fantasy as a joke, that flight from racial reality raises a substantial question. All the apparent standards of Old Money America would hold up Doris Duke as having won the game. What did she pursue when her Aretha wig came out of the closet?

Psychobabble serves no strong purpose. And to label her specific yearning would be simplistic dismissal. I'll venture only that the question itself has everything to do with wholeness and "soul" and joy against the odds and what white Americans find whenever they enter the jazz world with open minds and hearts.

The storied charisma of Bird Parker and Diz and Dexter — and John Coltrane too — can never be called a function of their individual personalities. When Aretha walks in, the room looks brighter. When Mose Allison visited KRML Jazz Radio recently, that environment clicked into another height for an hour or so. Truly. On good nights, San Francisco vocalist Kitty Margolis and Monterey Peninsula reedman John Cortes catalyze the same effect. The Presence.

I say The Presence. Call it what you will.

Doris Duke's experiment in living wasn't so goofy after all. Maybe ballet and symphony buffs hunt the same internal goodies; I don't know. What seems clear: the anecdote sets up one more lens through which Black History Month and the music and our biggest social challenges may be viewed. Perhaps if we name and then speak of the general hunger, that naming can put us all a bit closer to an ineffable result.

THE LINK between jazz and African dance was present when the music got born. During slave hoedowns at Congo Square (New Orleans), those ancient rhythms began mixing with tunes from France, Spain, Germany, Old England.

For a look at righteous roots, then, check out the Ceedo West African Dance Company in performance Thursday night (2/16) at the Naval Postgraduate School's King Hall Auditorium. The troupe was brought in for Black History Month by NPS, Defense Language Institute, Coast Guard Group, and Fort Ord.

Ceedo West reportedly features two former principal performers with the Senegal National Ballet. The presentation starts at seven o'clock and costs just $5 per. Center Stage Ticketing will handle last-minute reservations if you wish.

As long as we're talking about dance, the new film of Gregory Hines showcases great tappers — Bunny Briggs, Steve Condos, Arthur Duncan, Harold Nicholas, Sandman Sims, Jimmy Slyde. Reasonably enough, the dramatic musical carries Taps as its title and also casts Gregory and Sammy Davis Jr. in dancing roles. (Duke Ellington used Bunny Briggs at the wondrous Sacred Concerts.)

Hines plays an ex-con who must choose between the tapper's life and criminal activity. Says he: "One of the things this movie teaches is love and respect for elders. That's important because we live in a time when the young too often don't feel love at home." One sequence brings forth The Challenge — a tradition that stands about equal to the "cutting session" of jazz musicians.

Meanwhile, San Francisco Opera announces the program for the May 18-21 run of Arthur Mitchell's Dance Theater of Harlem at War Memorial Opera House. Included will be the much-praised Giselle that's set in 19th century Louisiana. Also John Henry and Fall River Legend.

This's a hot item. If you have eyes to attend, call the Opera House Box Office right away. Mitchell loves jazz and incorporates it every chance he gets.

And don't forget the new program put together by Tandy Beal Dance Company with jazz pianist Art Lande and oboist Paul McCandless. It will go on public view next week (2/24-25) at Cabrillo College Theater. More next time.

KIMBALL'S EAST, the new and major jazz club in Emeryville, has booked its first stars. So says spokesperson Ann Dyer.

The Herbie Hancock Trio with great drummer Tony Williams and Buster Williams on bass signed up for March 28 till April 2. The Bobby Hutcherson Quartet will open for them—"and Bobby will join Herbie's group to play some things. They worked together in the Round Midnight film so this'll be a reunion."

Just that first night's set aside as an invitational Grand Opening. Address: 5800 Shellmound within the new Powell Street Development.

Ann announces as well that Ahmad Jamal will play there April 5-8. Dizzy Gillespie follows (4/11-15). May 3-7 it'll be Freddie Hubbard, Joe Henderson and Cedar Walton co-leading a quintet.

Speaking of greatness, drum master Art Blakey will bring his latest Jazz Messengers into Kuumbwa Jazz Center on Monday night (2/20). The Santa Cruz venue promises shows at 7:30 and 9:30. It's $13.50 per; Center Stage Ticketing will take reservations.

Art Blakey long has been famed as a spotter and mentor of future heavyweights. Jazz Messenger alumni include Cedar Walton, Wayne Shorter, Curtis Fuller, Lee Morgan, Wynton Marsalis, Kenny Dorham, James Williams, Billy Pierce, Bobby Watson, Randy Brecker, on and on.

SUNDAY NIGHTS at the Sheraton's Monterey Bay Club come off as a treat. The solo gig of excellent pianist Bobby Phillips has evolved into a steady duo with the precise and swinging Terry Miller on electric bass. First set starts at eight o'clock—there's time to catch bright tunes before hitting the sack toward Monday morn.

MAKING HIS MARK—Jazz vocalist Mark Murphy won a Grammy nomination with his knockout album September Ballads. Winners will be announced next week (2/22) during Los Angeles ceremonies carried by CBS-TV. Bobby McFerrin pulled down five nominations in various categories. (Will Wallace Photo)

Bob and Terry share respect for the music and glad communication—a rhythmic ping-pong playfulness that gives standards some fresh slants. And their book makes room for less usual, straight-ahead items like Kenny Dorham's Prince Albert.

Additionally, friends drop by to sit in. Some of the regulars: Stan Wolfe on tenor, Kenny Stahl (jazz flutes), drummers Roland Allen and Eddie Graham, Buddy Jones on acoustic bass, alto player and keyboardist Loren Pickford, New Yorker Andy Marsala. Bob says of the latter: "He's a fine pianist, composer and reedman. I think he may settle here."

When another pianist takes the bench, Phillips plays his clarinet or soprano.

Bay Club: Smith and Gail Dobson (2/16)—tenorman Terry Hanck and his Soul Rockers (2/17-18)—Bob and Terry (2/19)—Duo Du Jour (2/20)—Jackie Coon and Ed Erickson (2/21)—Higher Feelings (2/22-23).

Photographic trio captures spirit of Venetian carnival

this carnival. They also produced a book that serves as an anthology on the subject — voicing the impressions of carnival observers over the past seven centuries.

Their portrayal of the carnival in Venice was shown in the Munich Fotomuseum one year ago in an exhibit entitled, "Die Zeit der Masken."

"We thought, let's bring the carnival to Carmel," Lohmann added.

"So we decided to get together as close to the start of Lent as we could," explained Goode, a Carmel resident since 1972. Goode's color photographs, captured with both her 35mm and Hasselblad cameras, were taken during the Carnvela di Venezia in both 1986 and '88. Mar and Lohmann documented in 35mm black and white in 1983 and '84.

"It's just pure fantasy," says Goode of the event. "It's not like the carnival in Rio. In Venice people dress in the morning in gorgeous 18th century costumes and go that way all day. It's a parade."

"The entire city turns into a theater," added Mar.

Although Goode had not met the European team until their Carmel visit, all three were in agreement about the magical quality of the event.

"We tried to capture the lyrical side of Venice. Sometimes there is a very cold light there," explained Mar. "After Carmel, our show will go to Northern Germany and perhaps China. There has always been a very strong, traditional connection between Venice and China, going back to their common trading routes."

Mar was born in Hong Kong and grew up in Salinas. She studied immunology at the University of California at Berkeley and is now working in that field in Munich, where she has lived since 1974. She has performed basic and clinical research at various Max Planck institutes, at the University Children's clinic and is currently working on a leukemia research project at the Institute for Immunology.

German-born Rainer Lohmann studied the sociology of mass communications at the University of Munich and conducted different research projects in mass media. He served as production manager and assistant director for a semi-documentary film produced by German television.

Mar and Lohmann met during the Munich Olympics in 1972.

"Rainer was taking photos and I showed up in his pictures," she said.

The two have an unusual working relationship because they work as a literal team.

"We work basically in black and white, mostly 35mm documentary work," Mar noted. "It wasn't planned, but we first fell in love and we both had an interest in photography. Then we started photographing together. We actually take a lot of photographs together. if there is time, we both look through the viewfinder and discuss the shot. We also do darkroom work together."

Another of Mar's specialties is hand-tinting photographs. Together Mar and Lohmann captured views of the American desert, taking pictures in Utah, New Mexico and California.

Carmel photographer Pete Goode has recently returned from journeys to Mexico and London.

"I travel constantly with my cameras and I capture either people or still lifes," she explained. "The Carnival of Venice is one of the most exotic events — this and the Camel Fair in India."

Goode, who takes the name Pete from her maiden name, Pedersen, began studying photography formally following a 1977 trip to China. She maintains her own darkroom and has attended photography workshops in Nevada, Maine, Santa Fe, France and locally.

THE KEYBOARD Artist Series presents Brazilian pianist Nelson Freire in recital on Sunday, Feb. 19. Freire will perform works by Bach, Brahms, Debussy, Villa-Lobos and Prokofiev. His concert begins at 4 p.m. in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

Brazilian pianist Nelson Freire performs

BRAZILIAN PIANIST Nelson Freire returns to Carmel for a Sunday, Feb. 19 recital, presented under the auspices of the Keyboard Artist Series.

Freire, in addition to receiving numerous awards and prizes, has also earned the admiration and respect of his colleagues. Andre Watts professes to be in awe of Freire, stating "His playing is scary — he plays with incredible ease." Pianist Misha Dichter commented, "Nelson is one of the great ones."

The pianist has released several recordings since his Carmel appearance three years ago. Among these are a recording of a two-piano recital with Martha Argerich.

For his Carmel recital Freire will play Bach's "English Suite No. 3 in G Minor," Brahms' "F Minor Sonata," "Four Preludes" by Debussy, two works by Villa-Lobos and the Prokofiev "Seventh Sonata."

The concert will begin at 4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 19 in Sunset Theater, located on San Carlos Street near Ninth Avenue in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Admission is $11, $13, $15 and $17, according to seating location. At press time, the $17 seats were sold out. Tickets can be reserved through Center Stage Ticketing in downtown Monterey, 649-5561; or at the Sunset Center box office on the afternoon of the performance.

Former 'Time-Life' journalist autographs his book

RALPH GRAVES, journalist for Life Magazine, will sign his new book Share of Honor at the Thunderbird Bookshop, Tuesday, Feb. 21 from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m.

The Philippines, before and during World War II, is the setting for Graves' historical novel. Through a cast of fictional characters, the courage, love and death of the Filipino people is documented.

Mike Wallace of "60 Minutes" states, "to a World War II Navy hand from the Philippines, Share of Honor triggers vivid memories, funny and sad. It reads like fiction but you know it's fact."

Reviewer David McCullough comments, "The savage, heart-breaking, heroic, nearly unbelievable story of the Philippines in World War II will be a vague or 'forgotten' chapter in our American past no more. Share of Honor is a rousing book, fiction made especially vivid by Ralph Graves' respect for historical truth, his absolutely sure sense of place."

Graves began his lifelong career in journalism as a reporter for Life in 1948, eventually becoming editorial director of Time Inc. The stepson of the U.S. High Commissioner, he lived in the Philippines as a teenager. When the Japanese invaded, he was in the States; the rest of his family escaped to Corregidor and then by submarine to Australia. He returned to the Pacific in 1943-45 as a U.S. Army Air Force sergeant and took part in the liberation of the Philippines.

The Thunderbird Bookshop is located in The Barnyard off Highway 1 between Carmel Valley and Rio roads. For more information call 624-1803.

Orchestra trains young musicians

The Youth and Honors Orchestras of Monterey County are now offering a training program for beginning and intermediate student instrumentalists who are interested in becoming members of the orchestras. The training program is designed to prepare students to enter the orchestras when they reach intermediate skills. Training is available at this time for viola, oboe, bassoon, French horn, string bass and trombone.

There will be no charge for this training to any student who demonstrates the motivation to progress and who resides in Monterey County. If a student is accepted into the Youth or Honors Orchestra, and wishes to continue with the trainer, lesson fees will then be charged to the student.

For further information or to schedule an audition, contact Michelle Noseworthy at 625-1955.

ON STAGE

Danny and the Deep Blue Sea

A stark slice of raw drama, concerning two down-and-out people who meet in a New York bar, is the premiere production of the Big Sur Players. Perham Slate portrays Danny and Kim Candler is Roberta in Danny and the Deep Blue Sea, a drama written by John Patrick Shanley, the author of Moonstruck. The production is directed by David Bentley.

Danny and the Deep Blue Sea previews at the Grange Hall in Big Sur on Wednesday, Feb. 22. Performances continue at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, Feb. 23-25. Admission is $3 for the preview and $5 for performances. All are welcome, but it is suggested — due to the often course language and adult subject matter — that no one under 18 attend.

The Big Sur Grange Hall is located on the west side of Highway 1 between Glen Oaks and Fernwood in Big Sur. For more information or reservations, call 372-9308.

Ticket prices on Thursdays are $8.50 general and $7 for students, seniors and the military. Tickets on Fridays and Saturdays are $9.50 general and $8 for students, seniors and the military. Village Wooing features Norman Stottmeister and Gail Higgenbotham as the quintessential and chauvian male and female. The Man of Destiny features Mark Shuler as Napoleon, Carey Crockett as his lieutenant, Marlie Avant as "the strange lady" and Ellis Albee as Guiseppe.

A work-in-progress of the Western Stage, The Good War expresses the ideas and innocence of people who lived in the United States and abroad during the epic years of World War II.

Human Race needs volunteers

Fred Kennedy, retired U.S. Army officer, will serve as coordinator for the 1989 Human Race on May 13.

The Human Race is held annually to allow nonprofit groups to collect funds. Members of each nonprofit get pledges from friends, acquaintances and strangers for from 1 cent up for each kilometer the member walks. The 10 kilometer walk/race starts at Monterey High School, the route goes to Fisherman's Wharf then along the Recreation Trail to Lover's Point, returning to MHS.

Last year's race brought in nearly $80,000 for the 81 organizations that participated. There were 800 walkers in 1988, even though it rained.

Any group wishing to enter this year's race may contact Kennedy at the Volunteer Center of the Monterey Peninsula, 373-6177.

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
CITY COUNCIL
URGENCY ORDINANCE NO. 89-12

AN ORDINANCE ADDING SECTION 17.24.245 TO THE MUNICIPAL CODE REGARDING EXTERIOR LIGHTING IN THE R-1 LAND USE DISTRICT.

WHEREAS, a traditional value of Carmel-by-the-Sea is the lack of street lights and nighttime illumination in the residential districts; and

WHEREAS, low level illumination and evening darkness contribute to the residential character of the community; and

WHEREAS, Objective 02-5 of the General Plan states, "Preserve and enhance the qualities that contribute to the residential character of the community, including quiet neighborhoods, low levels of illumination, lack of nighttime activity, safe environment, pedestrian use of streets, and maintenance of property values by mitigating the adverse impacts of high volume through-traffic."; and

WHEREAS, recently the City has witnessed a dramatic increase in the number and brilliance of lights on private property in the residential district; and

WHEREAS, some lighting is needed for safety and security reasons, but if the amount and brightness of lighting are uncontrolled, a traditional value of the community will be significantly compromised; and

WHEREAS, lighting in the commercial land use districts is currently addressed through the design review process but there are not standards for the residential district;

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section One: The following section is added to the R-1 Land Use District regulatoins in the Municipal Code.

17.24.245 Exterior Lighting: The following standards shall apply to the installation of all permanent, exterior lighting and lighting fixtures:

A. All exterior lighting shall be limited to 40 watts or less per fixture.

B. No exterior lighting shall be permitted within the front yard setback except garden lighting fixtures not exceeding eighteen inches (18") in height above grade. Garden lighting systems shall be limited to 40 watts or less per fixture which shall be at least 10 feet apart from any other garden lighting fixtures.

C. The installation of all permanent exterior lighting above eighteen inches (18") in height shall be subject to the design review process and the following standards:

1. Illumination shall be limited to lighting the areas of entrances, gateways, walkways, decks and patios.

2. The maximum height of any free-standing light fixtures shall be ten feet (10') when installed behind any setback. All fixtures installed on the exterior of any dwelling or accessory building shall be mounted under the eave line or at a lower height.

Section Two: Severability. If any part of this ordinance is found to be unenforcebale, such finding shall not affect the enforceability of any other part.

Section Three: Statement of Urgency: The City Council finds that because of the uncontrolled proliferation of residential lighting, there is an immediate threat to public welfare if such lighting is not subject to design review.

Section Four: Effective Date. This ordinance is hereby declared to be an urgency ordinance as established in section 65858 of the California Government Code. This ordinance shall take effect immediately upon approval by at least a four-fifths vote of the City Council and shall remain effective for forty-five days unless repealed or extended as established by State Statute.
